This was Judge Lovett's recoilection of what Kahn had reported to him. Judge Lovett reiterated the statement that the conversations were very brief, as the railroad did not take any stock in the representations of the telephone conversationalists.

Judge Lovett said he doubted very much that Congressman Riordan had ever engaged in the practices.

"Was there some stock jobbing scheme connected with this?" Senator Walsh,
"There is always some stock job-legislative agent was never mentioned. The negotiations, said Judge Lovett, never got that far. Before Judge Lovett began his testimony, Senator Overman read the Norris resolution calling for the railroad official's appearance, and the inroad official's appearance, and the in-terview in which Judge Lovett said he had recently been approached by persons who said great influence could be exerted on the dissolution plans for the Southern Pacific if the proper attorneys were employed. Judge attorneys were employed. Judge Lovett admitted the substantial accuracy of the interview.
